

Yellow Flag Iris (Iris pseudacorus)

Yellow Flag Iris is a beautiful but highly aggressive wetland invasive that forms dense thickets and outcompetes native plants like cattails, sedges, and rushes. It is easily identified because it is the only wet-footed species of Iris. Established infestations reduce available habitat for nesting birds, reduces carrying capacity of water storage, and blocks irrigation canals and flood control ditches.